Program Requirements, Description and 8-Semester Plan

~~Family Policy Concentration The concentration in family policy will enable the doctoral graduate to assess the impact of public and private policy on children and families and consequently on the larger society. Depending on the interests and preparation of the student, specific issue areas may vary. The study of the history of family policy concerning children and families will provide a context for present policies and will clarify possibilities for the future.~~Family Policy Concentration

Course of Study (12 hours)

This concentration requires twelve hours of post masters studies. The three required courses are:

PUBP 6123--Research Problems in Policy

SOCI 6043 (or HESC 6043)--Public Policy, Children and Families

HESC 5403--Advanced Family Relations

In addition, three hours of approved electives must be taken. This course will be chosen in consultation with the Ph.D. course committee, to fit the particular needs of the student. The following courses would meet this requirement:

LAWW 5073--Domestic Relations

LAWW 5063--Education Law

LAWW 7012--Juvenile Justice Seminar

LAWW 6013--Alternative Dispute Resolution
