Program Requirements, Description and 8-Semester Plan

~~Policy Studies in Aging Concentration It is appropriate to offer a concentration in this area because studies in aging are heavily influenced by public policy. As the median age of Americans increases, there is increasing interest in the effect of policies on various issues related to aging. In fact, the aging of the baby boomers presents the single greatest challenge to public policy in America over the next three to five decades. Issues of aging within this society affect policy in many domains, including health, family, and disability practices. The emphasis of this concentration will be to investigate the effects of public policy issues related to aging and the effects of an aging population on public policy.~~
Policy Studies in Aging Concentration

Course of Study (12 hours)

Required course work for the concentration include:

GERO 5023--Critical Issues in Aging

CDIS 699V--Seminar in Communication Sciences and Disorders

Six hours to be selected from the following with the approval of the student's curriculum committee:

HLSC 6733--Health and the Aging Process

HLSC 5623--Health Planning

HLSC 5633--Health Services Administration

HESC 5403--Advanced Family Relations

RHAB 6203--Disability Policy in the U.S.

(Note: with the approval of the curriculum committee, other courses may be selected, depending on the student's area of interest).
