Justification

Overview

The International Studies program wishes to make the attached changes to its curriculum in order to enhance the rigor of the INST major while providing students with more flexibility to choose courses relevant to International Studies that will facilitate a variety of career pathways. The total number of hours in the major (48) remains unchanged.

International Studies Core

In the current curriculum, students are required to take a prescribed set of core courses not under the control of the program, including some that are not listed as University Core electives. This has created an undue burden on other departments to offer courses for INST majors. In the proposed curriculum, students have more choices for their core, as they can now choose from added options from the social sciences. They can now also choose which core courses are most appropriate for them, since no specific courses are required except for INST 2013 Introduction to International Studies and INST 4003 International Studies Seminar, which are provided by the program. A required selection of ECON courses provides students with the prerequisites for upper-level ECON courses offered in the major, but students may still choose either the one-semester ECON 2143 or the two-semester ECON 2013 and 2023.

Mathematics Requirement

The math requirement has been enhanced, and students must now take one course higher than College Algebra. This is intended to prepare students for success in the advanced social science courses they take to fulfill the major's upper-level requirements and better prepares them for the graduate programs and career pathways associated with International Studies.

Description and justification of the Language Requirement

The language requirement remains unchanged, except that it specifies the languages approved for the requirement. This is intended to prevent students from enrolling in language programs that do not have advanced offerings and would therefore not provide the hours students need to meet the requirement.

Area Studies Requirement

Just as in the current curriculum, students are asked to complete hours in a selected area studies program in order to build depth of knowledge in one world region. In this curriculum, students complete more hours (9 instead of 6), which better balances this portion of the curriculum against the Global Studies Requirement. The proposed curriculum also creates a more even set of requirements for the respective area studies programs. This means that students will be obliged to select at least two upper-level courses, including at least one 4000-level course from the list of electives provided by the chosen area studies program.

Global Studies Requirement

The proposed curriculum removes the "track" concentrations that had been part of the previous curriculum. In practice, these six concentrations had created challenges for students, because there were too few available courses in many cases for students to complete the track without substitutions, and the selection of courses often overlapped too much with the area studies requirement. In this curriculum, students may choose any combination of courses (mostly 3000-level and above) from four categories connected more firmly to global themes, such as international security, global environment, etc.. This is intended to provide more advanced methodological exposure while fostering breadth of knowledge of world issues and trends that transcend specific world regions. The requirement thus provides a much wider variety of courses for students to choose in preparation for chosen career pathways. This requirement also offers students studying a second language to apply a portion of that credit to the major, and it makes it easier for students to apply study abroad, internship, independent studies, and thesis credit to the major. The list of individual offerings includes interdisciplinary courses approved for the major by the chairs of the respective departments.

Courses that were more relevant to area studies treating only one world region (for example, HIST 3043 History of the Modern Middle East) were removed from the Global Studies list. Because the Middle East Studies program offers this course, students selecting Middle East as an area study may elect to take it to fulfill their Area Studies Requirement.

ddraper (09/28/16 1:37 pm): Removed PLSC 3813 from group 1, because the PLSC department is deleting that course.

kboston (10/10/16 5:19 pm): It appears that the ECON 2013 and ECON 2023 or ECON 2143 requirement is listed under the Economics requirement and under Group 2: International Economics and Trade. If they are going to be required, the lower division classes should be listed under the Economics Requirement and only the upper division ones should be listed under Group 2? Also, in order to be eligible for the upper division Economics courses, students must complete ECON 2013 AND ECON 2023 OR ECON 2143. Currently, it is stated as ECON 2013 OR ECON 2023 OR ECON 2143 under the Economics requirement and ECON 2013 OR ECON 2023 under Group 2: International Economics and Trade.

kboston (10/11/16 3:07 pm): Rollback: See comments ddraper (10/12/16 11:01 am): Per request of WCOB and consent of the International Studies program director, made a minor modification to Group 2 to remove ECON 2013 or ECON 2023 from the list of Group 2 courses. Added a footnote to the upper-level ECON courses listed in Group 1 and 2 indicating that ECON 2143 is a prerequisite for upper-level ECON courses or that students may satisfy the prereq requirement by completing both ECON 2013 and ECON 2023. No changes to any specifically required courses.

ddraper (10/12/16 11:33 am): Modified language slightly to further emphasize that if ECON

2013 or ECON 2023 is selected to fulfill the Economics Requirement, both ECON 2013 and ECON 2023 must be completed if a student wishes to enroll in upper-level ECON courses.
