Description and justification of the request

Description of specific change	Justification for this change
3 Hours for Math or Statistics replaced with ENGL 1103, Reading Literature	Courses outside the department in this area were removed to provide a space in the early semesters of the major to train students in close reading and textual analysis, core skills for an English major.
3 hours of Philosophy coursework replaced with ENGL 2043, Rethinking Literature	Courses outside the department in philosophy were removed to make space for a departmental course in the philosophy of what is and is not literature. Being conversant in what is and is not Literature and why is a core skill for English majors.

Description of specific change	Justification for this change
ENGL 2303, 2313, 2323, 2343, and 2353 were removed. ENGL 2053, 2063, 2073, 2083, and 2093 will replace them.	The existing surveys were presented to students in a fashion that did not ensure each student would have a broad knowledge of the major periods of English literature. The change in courses to a Transatlantic model reduces the number required, allowing all students to take a survey of each major period of English literature.
ENGL 4303 requirement removed, replaced with Period Requirement	Mirroring the change to the surveys, we removed the specific requirement for ENGL 4303 and replaced it with a broader requirement that students' upper-division coursework should be balanced chronologically across the history of English literature.
Topics requirements were removed, replaced with Concentrations	Like the surveys, the topics requirements presented barriers to students having any sense of coverage in their upper-division coursework. To replace this and to underscore key areas of expertise in the department, we have required students to take 9 hours of coursework in a specific area of focus. This will give students guidance towards how they see their degree and their professional future, and we hope it will give students a clearer path to graduating on time.
Upper Division Electives added alongside 4000-level requirement	This requirement gives students clarity in their selection of upper-division electives and also ensures students will have a considerable number of rigorous upper-division coursework in their degree plan. This upper-division focus also extends to concentrations in varying levels.
