Program Goals and Objectives

The Program's goal is to allow students to develop the craft and skills necessary for careers requiring knowledge of history, critical analysis, and research, including teaching, law, government, and private business organizations. The global scope of the program allows students to pursue their interest in a particular region, time, period, or culture, while also being exposed to cultural diversity and contextualization in an increasingly interdependent world.

Description and justification of the request

Description of specific change	Justification for this change
Revising program requirements with new sections and creating four concentrations.	The main purposes of this curriculum change are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> -- to step beyond a focus on content and a distribution of regional knowledge to a new emphasis on content, skill training, experiences, and outcomes development -- to create concentrations, based on thematic and methodological approaches, and to direct students toward specializing in one of such concentrations -- to thus design a curriculum providing structured opportunities for cohort-building and mentorship. -- to create pathways, based on thematic and methodology approaches, that will improve the pre-professional training of our students toward a variety of career opportunities and graduate school disciplines (for ex., Law, Foreign Service, Public History, NGOs) -- to incorporate experiential and methodological courses into the curriculum -- to incorporate diversity and inclusion elements into each concentration

Description of specific change	Justification for this change
	The new program also improves the following existing curricular elements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> -- It integrates existing and new 1000/2000-level topical courses into the curriculum -- While maintaining the core curriculum requirements, it reduces the number of credit hours required for a History major, thus allowing students to improve their interdisciplinary training with the choice of electives outside their concentration or major -- This includes an increased opportunity to add minors or double majors that can be coordinated with the selected HIST concentration -- It improves the opportunities for Internships through a structured requirement (Application in History) which encourages experiential involvement in local and national institutions, organizations, museums -- It provides opportunities for students outside the Department to benefit from DEI teaching and for majors/minors to build depth in these areas. The new program aligns with what several peer and aspiring peer institutions have done, with the similar intent of improving the retention, professional development, and formation of an educated, specialized, and diverse polity through a History degree
