Program Requirements, Description and 8-Semester Plan

History of Architecture and Design Minor (HARD-M)

This minor will provide students with a structured curriculum for developing skills of scholarship and applied research in the history of architecture and design. Students in our professional design programs will broaden their opportunities in professional practice or prepare to pursue graduate education in this area; students in allied disciplines from the larger campus will have the opportunity to complement and enhance majors in humanities and social science disciplines with close study of the history of the made and natural environments. In addition, the minor will encourage cross-disciplinary and interdisciplinary learning experiences for students through methods of architectural historical inquiry.

Pre-requisites:

For Fay Jones School Students

ARCH 1015 or LARC 1315 or IDES 1035

ARCH 1025 or LARC 1325 or IDES 1045

ARCH 1212 Design Thinking I

ARCH 1222 Design Thinking II

For all other students

ARCH 1003 or LARC 1003 or ARHS 1003

History of Architecture and Design Core Courses^[1]

9 credit hours selected from the following courses:

ARCH 2233 History of Architecture ⁽¹⁾

ARCH 2243, History of Architecture ⁽¹⁾

ARCH 4433, History of Architecture

ARCH 4523, Architectural Theory

LARC 3413, History of Landscape Architecture

LARC 4413, History of Landscape Architecture

LARC 4033, Theory

IDES 2883, History of Interiors

Advanced History of Architecture and Design Courses

9 credit hours of 3000+ level courses selected from the following:

ARCH 4483, Architecture of the Americas

ARCH 4553, Modern Architecture in Mexico ⁽²⁾

ARCH 4673, Modern and Contemporary Rome ⁽²⁾

ARCH 4843, Medieval Architecture

ARCH 4023, Advanced Architectural Studies (variable topics in history of architecture) ⁽³⁾

LARC 402V, Special Studies (variable topics in the history of landscape architecture) ⁽³⁾

[1] A Fay Jones School student can present only 9 hours of courses required for the major field of study for credit for the minor. 3000+ courses that are not required for the major can be presented for "advanced" credit in the minor.

[2] Only three hours of credit earned in Study Abroad courses can be presented for credit toward the History of Architecture and Design minor.

[3] A menu of variable topics courses that will qualify for credit toward the History of Architecture and Design Minor will be published every semester.

Program Costs	The curriculum for the minor requirements are courses that we already offer and are required in our professional programs; therefore, the cost of teaching 18 hours is already budgeted making it easy to offer this value-added minor. A value-added approach which has been latent in our school and has gone unrecognized. There will be no new faculty hires for this program. Our existing facilities will be more than sufficient to accommodate new students most of whom are already in the Fay Jones School of Architecture and Design.
Library Resources	Existing library resources are sufficient to cover the needs of students wishing to pursue this minor.
Instructional Facilities	Our current instructional facilities, Vol Walker Hall classrooms and studios and the UA Rome Center classrooms and studios, are sufficient to meet the needs of this program.
Faculty Resources	We will utilize existing courses and faculty. No new hires will be needed.
Are Similar Programs available in the area?	No
List Existing Certificate or Degree Programs that Support the Proposed Program:	Courses from the architecture (B.Arch and ARSTBS), landscape architecture (BLA and LARCBS) and interior design (IDESBD) degree programs will be utilized to support the minor.
Estimated Student Demand for Program:	5 students per year, with the goal of reaching a cohort of 20 students in five years.
Scheduled Program Review Date:	NA
Program Goals and Objectives:	The History of Architecture and Design Minor will: <ul style="list-style-type: none">•Afford Fay Jones School students opportunities to acquire dedicated expertise in sub-disciplinary areas of inquiry that add value to their design education.•Provide opportunities to make the resources of the Fay Jones School for cultivating design thinking available to the larger community of University of Arkansas undergraduate students.•Enable students, especially those in the design disciplines, to customize their degree programs, increasing their marketability in the many areas of creative practice in which knowledge of history of architecture and design, and the research skills it inculcates, is relevant.

- Prepare students for advanced (graduate) study in the history and theory of design, an area in which Fay Jones alumni have attained a demonstrated record of success.

Students acquire the intellectual tools and methods of scholarly inquiry to engage in more advanced study and applied research of the history of architecture and design after completing the minor, including the ability to:

- Assess built form historically and contextually in terms of human experience, its organizational and revolutionary social, economic and religious changes, and emerging territorial states, colonialism, imperialism, and post colonialism.

- Evaluate historical architecture, landscape architecture, and design in terms of use, ritual, and social access (class, ethnicity, and gender).

- Survey the impact of architectural and design theory and practice on design.

Learning Outcomes:

- Enlarge one's disciplinary vocabulary for describing historical design, materials, and technologies.

- Amass a repertoire of precedents and typologies that can be deployed in resolving contemporary design problems.

- Distinguish diverse design principles in the religious and political architecture of non-Western cultures

- Apply interpretative principles in the analysis of vernacular architecture.

- Appreciate design ideas, theoretical positions, and cultural beliefs about architecture and design that may differ from one's own world views.

- For students in the professional curriculums, to view their own work as part of a larger continuum history and society, and, consequently, to think reflectively about it.

The Fay Jones School of Architecture and Design wishes to create a new minor in History and of Architecture and Design. We will to consolidate courses already being offered in the proposed area and provide a cohesive program for Fay Jones School students as well as students across campus who are interested in different aspects of the history of architecture and design. Historically, Fay Jones School students who aspire to graduate education or seek careers in sub-disciplinary areas of historic preservation and architectural history, elect the majority of their professional elective hours, (sometimes as many as 15 credit hours) in history of architecture, history of landscape architecture, and history of design courses. Similarly, these courses attract students from such allied disciplines as art history and history. The creation of a minor in History of Architecture and Design will provide these students with a recognized and structured curriculum for pursuing their academic interests, enhancing the existing majors.
