ANSC 2303	Course Last Update Effective	Fall 2014	Spring 2017
	Course Short Title	NATURAL HORSEMANSHIP	INTRO TO HORSEMANSHIP
	Course Long Title	Natural Horsemanship	Introduction to Horsemanship
	Course Catalog Description	A study of modern natural horsemanship training techniques involving the psychology and ethology (reason for the behavior) of equine social behavior and how it pertains to learning patterns; application of fundamental behavioral concepts in training of horses, and modification of desirable and undesirable behavioral patterns.	A study of modern horsemanship training techniques involving the psychology and ethology (reason for the behavior) of equine social behavior and how it pertains to learning patterns; application of fundamental behavioral concepts in training of horses, and modification of desirable and undesirable behavioral patterns.
	Justification	This change is being made because of the availability of a year round horse herd as opposed to the previous situation in which horses were sold each year. The class as changed will place more emphasis on the contrast of natural training methods with other training methods. The existance of a permanent herd will also allow the class to be offered to more students through both a Spring and Fall offering.	Changing the name of this course will create a more encompassing course title for students from multiple horse backgrounds (including no background at all). The new title provides for a broad survey of horsemanship, behavior and the applied training techniques therein. The new name will also allow the possibility of additional classes to be added in the future (which could be named Intermediate Horsemanship, Advanced Horsemanship, etc.) as the building block for a progression of courses.
	Course Additional Notes	ANSC Faculty approved syllabus attached. Request this change be effective Fall 2014.
