Description and Justification for this request

Description of request

Justification for request

Description of request	Justification for request
Adding a new concentration within the HISTBA program.	Comprising four courses in the major, each Concentration reorients the Department's existing elective courses away from traditional regional categories into new thematic concentrations. The Concentration requirement is complemented by six hours of open electives, which allow students to select courses outside their concentration area and to apply one lower-level US or world survey (which benefits students who join the major with credit for multiple surveys) or thematic survey course, which gives them flexibility to choose courses based on interest. While some concentrations may naturally attract students seeking specific career sectors, no single concentration is intended to connect directly with a particular career, which allows students to grow and shift their focus over time. This concentration focuses on governance and civics across time and place, with an emphasis on the political and social groups contending for participation and power. The concentration would be applicable to themes of law and society, histories of labor, political history, and issues related to civics and citizenship. It may appeal to students interested in the legal profession, public service, labor and business relations, foreign service, and teaching careers.
